

Tuesday

The glowing moon rose really slowly over the quiet water, reflecting its light on the beautiful lake. "There's something suspicious going on and I don't like it," whispered Kevin in the illuminating moonlight. As quick as lightning, his lily pad started to go up into the night sky. "What's going on?" stammered Kevin in shock. All the other lily pads started levitating as well.

Higher and higher they flew. More and more excited Kevin felt. He could hear shock and laughter everywhere. "Go faster," shouted Jack. "We're so far behind." Taking a huge breath, he sped up. Up they went into the illuminating night, turning and twisting as they followed the birds who were shocked at the sight and adventuring into the town. "This is incredible," screamed Kevin smiling at Jack who grinned back.

On they flew into the night sky, Kevin loosened his grip on the lily pad while they flew by houses. "I bet he can't believe what he is looking at," shouted Jack while passing through an open window. "He's probably forgotten that banana he was eating hasn't he," muttered Kevin as he waved to the open mouth man. "We're both so good at this now," shouted Jack as they went through a room. Kevin and Jack saw a tired old lady sleeping. The TV was on and they stopped to watch some of the programme 'Is It Cake?'. Then after ten minutes, they got bored so they went outside. Jack went out and soared around the garden and stumbled across a dog. The dog started to chase Jack around and Jack tried to outrun the dog.

After they escaped the mean dog, Kevin and Jack flew even higher and then they realised they were heading into a massive tree. "Oh no," shouted Kevin, trying to go backwards away from the tree. Kevin tried to stop but crashed into the tree and fell onto the ground. They gazed at the rising sun and in shock so they took off. "Oh maybe it was the sun that wore the magic off," realised Jack.

They felt that they had to go home. On the way home talked about their amazing experience. "That was so fun," shouted Kevin while smiling, "Yeah it was," replied Jack. "I wish we could do it again," said Kevin to Jack while laughing. "Me too," whispered Jack. "I hope that will happen again." They went back to their pond wondering what would happen next Tuesday.

By Theo and Finnlay